

Every person is infinitely precious and unique.

Why?

Secular man lives in the duality of praise and blame, acceptance and rejection, "mine and thine."

These principles will guide us up to the point where we, strengthened by the experience and knowledge of their vanity, will turn away from these illusions.

We are more than just physical bodies. What elevates us into the image of God, is our immortal, eternal soul that lives in the father's house.

"In my Father's house are many mansions." (John 14:2)

Being human is infinitely valuable and unique because it was created by God and therefore it is an expression of God's infinite love. By submitting to the laws of the mortal world, I am connected to the mortal body, believing that it is my Self. By identifying with it, the impression that this is the reality of "I", rises and the immortal soul which lives in God's presence gets out of focus.

How much power and energy are necessary to change this condition and to counteract this material adhering while unconditional happiness and satisfaction lie in our hearts, hidden in the divine self!

As I am willing to rethink and to recognize God's presence in every human alike, then I will not regard my life to be superior to another.

Then, eternal, all-embracing life will turn out to be our true and only reality. Then the love of Jesus Christ will be born in us, and will lead us to a "new life".

Then God's love will lift our worldly consciousness up to be celestial.
